Walking through Devendorf Plaza the other day I saw a young man in Stetson and cowboy boots who appeared to be braiding a rope under the careful observation of two older men and two small boys. Upon closer examination, that's precisely what he was doing.

"It's a bull rope," he explained cheerfully.

I looked around. Finding no bulls in sight, I assumed that his task was not urgent and so I engaged him in conversation.

It seems that he had a relative who ate nothing but fruit and salads and talked about it all of the time. And so the young man would simply leave the house when things became unbearable, and go down to the park and braid bull ropes.

One of the small boys turned to the other, and with a faint inflection of disappointment said, "Oh, come on. Let's go over to Hilbert's and get some ice cream." One of the older men said to the other, "It beats me," and they also went away, shaking their heads.

The young man, with intense and adroit manipulation, continued to unlay the rope and braid up the strands, creating a belt about ten feet long, which appeared to be inextricably lashed to the tree.

"People think that I can't get this thing off the tree when I'm finished. But it's the knot that fools them. See?" he said, whipping the finished product away from the trunk.

"That's interesting," I agreed. "What's a bull rope for?"

"That's what the rider hangs on to in rodeos, when he rides bulls. I get fifteen to twenty-five dollars apiece for these."

We talked about other things, about rodeos and travel and how difficult it was to live in a house where the only conversation was about fruit and salads. The young man much preferred to speak about rodeos and the latest improvements in bull ropes. He wore a clear smile on his rather lean and weathered face as he carefully stretched and worked the precise braiding he had completed.

Finally, he coiled up the rope, stuck out his hand, and said, "It's shore been nice meetin' you. I've got to git home."

I said goodbye and walked across Ocean Avenue, to see what was new in the world of haute couture at I. Magnin's.

JEFFERS TO SUBDIVIDE TOR HOUSE LAND

When the general plan for Carmel and environs was evolved in 1956 and 1957, it pointed a respectful finger at the wild and lovely site of Robinson Jeffers' Tor House on Carmel Point, at Stewart Way, declaring that this should some day become a memorial park honoring the genius of the fierce and brooding poet.

If offensive to Jeffers, the plan was—as all plans are—harmless, because at that time it had neither funds nor authority to accomplish anything. It was all wish-work.

But nobody ever discovered, at least not officially, what Jeffers' thoughts, if any, might have been.

Probably disapproving, for he was not a vain man.

With the passage of time, and Jeffers himself, the park and the plan languished in obscurity, glanced at occasionally for projects within the city, but largely ignored otherwise, even by the now-developing Area General Plan, which is enchanted with skylines, but not those so close to sea level.

These considerations are academically interesting, but by Monday they may be little else. Donnan Jeffers, son of the deceased poet, has filed with the Monterey County Planning Commission an application for permission to subdivide the wild and moody land of the homesite into 11 building sites of approximately 6,000 square feet each, seven lots to the north of the high stone Tor House and four to the south.

The Carmel Planning Commission yesterday wistfully contemplated this thwarting turn of events and the ironic coincidence of time, finances and the general plan. For the city, with the enactment of the motel tax, is commencing to receive funds to accomplish some of the planned projects, and the Commission has begun the preparation of a project priority schedule, at the request of the City Council. But the preparation of such a schedule is a necessarily long, complicated and frequently arduous undertaking. Time, the Jeffers family, and the vicissitudes of politics may not wait.

The Planning Commission, as much as anybody, knows this. The Commission, as the result of its action yesterday, will not, apparently, oppose the subdivision. Since the land lies outside of the city, it is questionable, in view of past experience, if the county planning group would give such a protest, if made, any more than courteous but distant attention. So, the commission is sending the county a letter saying that, in accordance with the Carmel plan, it would be nice to have the area remain undeveloped and become a memorial park. A copy will be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Donnan Jeffers.

It is not too many years ago that the land to the east was the scene of many hotly-contested Abalone (Continued on Page Four)

The Jeffers property to the left of the road, is involved in subdivision petition to be heard Tuesday before the County Planning Commission.

REDISTRICTING: Politics or A Crusade?

If Colonel Allen Griffin had not so precipitously fled to the embrace of the State Supreme Court for succor in the current redistricting issue, Monterey County might today be within a couple of motions of its accomplishment. As it is, the county could be at least two years away from it if his suit is successful. And if it fails, the county could be so remote from adjustment of representation on the Board of Supervisors that its further contemplation could be of interest only to theoretical physicists.

This conclusion is not conjecture. It is the result of interviews with supervisors Tom Hudson, Chairman Harold Henry and Arthur Atteridge, recently appointed from Salinas to succeed Burt Talcott, now in Congress.

It is the result of an examination of the record of the proceedings before the Assembly Interim Committee on Municipal and County Government.

It is the result of information uncovered regarding certain meetings recently held in the southern part of the county.

It is the result of a consideration of the operation of the law in such matters, particularly the probable consequences should the court grant Colonel Griffin's prayer. Ever since he became Supervisor for the First District in 1956, Hudson has been working for redistricting. In the last session of the state legislature he made several attempts to appear in committee in support of the Bradley bill, which would have compelled redistricting after each Federal census, with emphasis on population as the "principal goal" in equalizing representation. The bill was stifled in committee, but Bradley, now a senator for Santa Clara county, has told Senator Fred S. Farr that he will re-introduce the bill this year, at the senate this time.

Hudson has also gone so far as to ask Assemblyman Alan Pattee and Farr if they would introduce legislation making it possible for the Board to create seven districts in the county. They have advised him that they would, and this week Hudson has written to them, asking what, if any, formal action the Board should take to get this accomplished; for, if it is, Henry leaves no doubt that the Board would act to carve up the Monterey and Salinas districts, providing one additional supervisor for each area.

This is not alone Hudson's idea. It was recommended by the better government committee in the King City area, and is favorably viewed throughout most of the county. But perhaps Hudson's attacking the proposition as a campaign promise has made the going more difficult than it needed to be. "I don't think that campaign promises of local importance requiring the acquiescence of the whole county should be made—even though I think the idea is good," comments Henry.

The idea is good, of course, because it does not disturb the integrity or authority of the other three districts, which the exact proportional redistricting that Griffin seeks undoubtedly would. The rest of the county is offended by the strict proportional concept because of its narrow rejection of geographical, economic and land use considerations.

Atteridge is somewhat more guarded in expressing his opinion, primarily because the issue has not been before the board during his tenure. "I have quite definite views," he says, "but I don't think that anything would be gained by a random expression of them at this time. If there is a proposal requiring some action of the Board, I will take a positive position, because I have positive convictions in the matter."

Apparently he will have the chance to make his statements Monday. Hudson said this afternoon that he will once again move the proposal to the Board at that time.

In the meanwhile, the specter of Griffin's suit hangs ominously over the scene. Hudson has said, "I'm not going to be dissuaded from doing what I think is right, and what I've promised to do, by the probability of the outcome of a law suit." And he has observed, as well, that, ironically, a victory for the Colonel might prevent anything being done for at least two years, because nothing could transpire during the terms of current members of the Board which would disturb their constituency or deprive them of their incumbency.

The possibility is not remote that the Court may yet reject the Colonel's petition, particularly if Farr and Pattee initiate any legislation, and the Board, under such enablement, demonstrates an intention to act. In cases such as these, courts are loath to interpose between a people and their own determination of their affairs. If this should happen, the matter may be returned to the county, but under an unfortunate cloud of resentment.

High School Track Asleep On The Blocks

While track seems important enough to make the national scene and bring General Douglas MacArthur from retirement to arbitrate a jurisdictional dispute between two track governing agencies, apparently the powers at Carmel High aren't quite as urgently concerned.

At a meeting of the Board of Education last night it was decided somewhat ambiguously to maybe do something or maybe not do something about a track coach for the coming year.

According to Principal Warren M. Edwards, the matter of a track coach will be taken care of within the Carmel High School staff. Principal Edwards, happily mingling metaphors, announced that "Nothing has been decided yet as some bases have to be touched and it is best to sleep on it."

Chief Clyde Klaumann spoke up on the importance of track and other after-school organized sports and how they affect the potential delinquent. He was thoroughly backed up by Reed Pollack and Bernard Roberts.

If track is important enough to embroil President Kennedy and General MacArthur in nation-wide headlines, it surely should be given at least equivalent consideration at Carmel High School.

The Morgan Plus 4 Is Examined

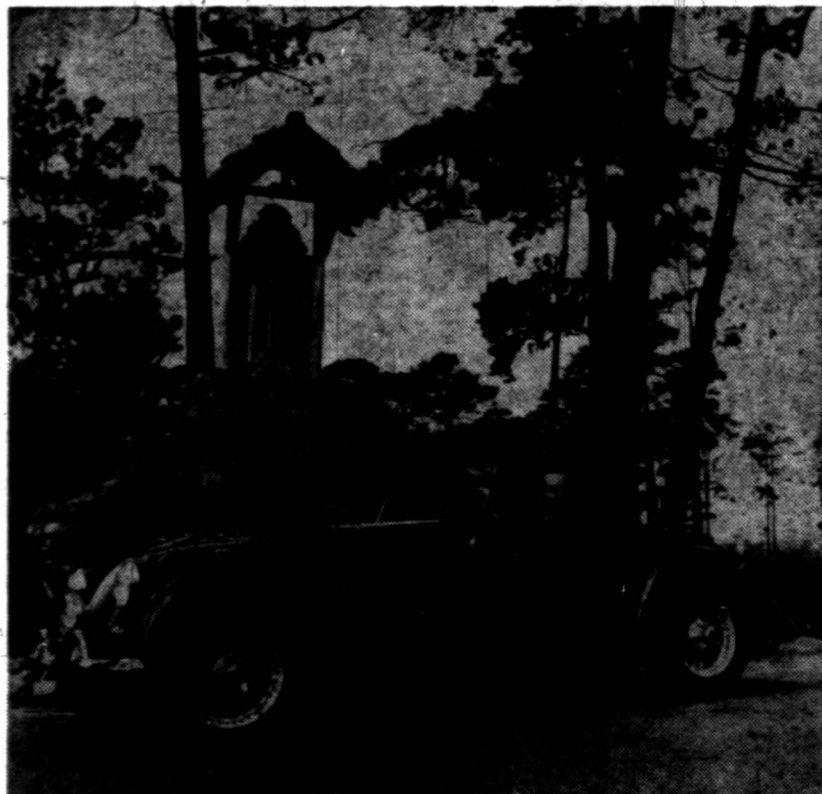

"REMEMBER HOW GREAT SPORTS CARS USED TO CORNER? ... MORGANS STILL DO!"

I read this ad in a current motoring magazine inserted by 37 U.S. dealers for the Last of the Classic Sports Cars. It brought memories of my two-year romance with a Morgan Plus 4.

The breed began some 53 years ago when one each enthusiast, H. F. S. Morgan, built a little 3-wheel

Carmel Woods.

I came upon Morgan when Chuck Baird, then in Carmel Hi, bought a wonderful 3-wheeler from I. W. Stephenson, for the amazing price of 1800 car washes! (I believe he actually paid off over the ensuing years.) The urge to own a Morgan grew, as it does on all enthusiasts, until one day Rick Hilgers and I each bought one, and went sports car driving, and racing.

car to go hillclimbing in Britain. He put a motorcycle-type engine up front between 2 motorcycle wheels and trailed a 2-seat body in back over a single wheel. The Morgan Motor Co., Malvern Link, Worcs. was started.

Long since, the 3-wheeler has evolved into a low, rakish sports car design gradually, carefully, culminating into the car shown in the picture by the Serra Monument in

What a car is a Morgan! Obviously not without fault (or they would build and sell more than their 420 models per year), but never without purpose, the car has not one wasted bolt or frivolous feature. It is constructed of the finest materials for the purpose, and the purpose is to provide a classically styled, high performance, light weight 2-seater at low cost.

CONSTRUCTION AND PERFORMANCE

An auto engineer would convulse at the thin flexible steel frame and wooden panels covered by aluminum and steel. The 50-year old sliding-pillar front suspension has coil springs riding up and down a steel shaft, leaving most of the shock absorption to the inflated air pillow in the leather covered seat cushion.

It is agreed that bodily contact with other cars is to be avoided by the Morgan driver. Its 1600 lb. weight with the 105 hp TR-3 or TR-4 engine gives exhilarating performance so it is in the driving that the Morgan thrills its operators!

Corner they do, absolutely flat, as if glued to the road. Long wheelbase, perfect weight distribution and wondrous steering give a control for rapid motoring that is hard to equal. I frightened no L. O. L. pedestrians by rounding the turn on Camino Del Monte up Serra at some 40—oops!—30 mph. No squealing tires, no lean, no effort, just a Morgan doing what it does best: cornering.

I can truthfully say that in racing my '58 Morgan I have had the car further out of shape, the tail nearly ahead of me, and retained better control than in any other sports car I have driven. The performance, at 1 h.p. per 15 lbs. needs no going into, so let us investigate what is outstanding, different, and amazing about the Morgan I tested, a 1963 model provided by Ray Ramsey and Bill Wellborn of Kunstle Motors, Monterey.

The height, 52 inches; the length, 12 inches; always will be. The most rugged of all production engines, the 2 litre Triumph 4 cyl., transmits power through a gentle but firm clutch to a 2 foot extension leading back to a Moss (Jaguar type) transmission with 4 gears strong enough to be classified indestructible. The gear lever falls to hand wondrously, making changing gears a joy, and though it takes a forceful movement to control it, which is true in controlling any thoroughbred. Ratios are close together, so you often run in third gear when hastening up to 75 or so.

The ride is aided by a recommended 16-18 lbs. tire pressure, which any worthwhile Morgan owner increases by 12 lbs. After all, this car it bought to be adored, to enthuse over and enjoy; if the ride is to be firm, let's keep it that way! When you top one of Bill Askew's blacktopped tree roots at speed, you merely leave the ground until the danger is behind you, and return to road unscathed.

CURIOUS LUBRICATION

Periodically you prod around with tippie-toe for a small button on the firewall (scuttle) and depress it for a few moments, routing some of your engine oil pressure through a small line to lubricate the front springs where they slide (I believe they really DO slide) up and down on their shafts.

The low-cut doors close easily, as in the old MG-TD, never having to be slammed.

The guarantee instructs you to inspect the car before delivery and should anything happen later, you are to mail the part to the factory, where they will consider a replacement part. This seldom occurs, as the Morgan is patiently assembled by a small group of skilled enthusiasts who rectified their errors in assembly 10 or 20 years ago. You may specify triple-laced wire wheels with knock-off hubs, a Brooklands wire-spoked steering wheel, a finned aluminum oil sump, even a race-prepared engine and light aluminum body panels if you wish. The paint comes in real colors, like red or blue.

The Morgan is a restored classic delivered new. It looks like a sports car, smells and sounds like a sports car, knows no year model obsolescence and makes no apology for being what it is, a sports car! Don't compare it to Madison Avenue's idea of transportation, and don't sing "The Mickey Mouse Club" song to it. If you are going through life without leaving the flock, without going all the way in sporting, don't even consider it! But, if you have that spark, if you still like real fenders, or dials on the dash, if your ears pick up that certain exhaust rumble, and your nose knows good leather, then you pick up your gloves and car coat and head for Pearl and Abrego, Monterey, and say "MORGAN, A REAL SPORTS CAR!"

Mercurio Reappointed

Governor Edmund G. Brown has announced his reappointment of Paul S. Mercurio to the Board of Barber Examiners for a four-year term.

"Mr. Mercurio has done a splendid job with this board. He has earned reappointment and I am pleased to continue him in public service," the governor said.

The governor first appointed Mercurio in December of 1960.

Mercurio has had a long experience with the Barbers Union and has been president of the California Firemen's Association. He is the owner of the Pine Inn Barber Shop.

BUSINESS

Split

The prosperous seventeen-year partnership of Putnam & Raggett, the dry goods firm on Ocean Avenue, is finished. Frank Putnam is disposing of his interest in the business to Mark Raggett.

Manager Change

The management of the La Playa Hotel has changed. Dean Ireland, president of the Visitors Association of the Monterey Peninsula (VAMP) has replaced George W. Goldsworthy, who has been obliged to retire because of illness.

Ashton Stanley, managing lessee, presently trying to pull the Roney Plaza of Miami Beach out of the hole, rushed back to Carmel briefly to make the appointment.

Ireland, at one time leasing operator of the De Anza Hotel in San Jose, as well as others on the west coast, is owner of the Park Crest Motel in Monterey, and has been an energizing force in hotel affairs on the peninsula.

EVENTS

Wildlife Film

"Nova Scotia—Land of the Sea," fourth in a series of Audubon Wildlife Films, will be shown on Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Sunset School auditorium. Those who do not have season tickets may purchase single admissions at the door.

Robert C. Hermes, photographer, lecturer and artist, will take his audience into the heart of the hemlock and spruce primeval forests, pointing out the importance of the proper use and maintenance of such woodlands; along the Nova Scotian coast with its cormorant rookeries and natural habitats of petrels, common eiders, and the puffins; to the Minas Basin, where lapse-time photography brings in the 50-foot tides in 30 seconds.

Mr. Hermes became a naturalist at 12, was a commercial artist, and studied at the Art Students League in New York City. As a photographer he was invited by the Royal Ontario Museum to film their Ungava expedition to the world's largest meteorite crater in the Canadian Arctic, was commissioned to make two wildlife films for the Creole Petroleum Corporation of Venezuela, and has recently completed another, sponsored by the province of Nova Scotia. His pictures and writings have appeared in 47 magazines throughout the world, including Collier's, Life, and the Illustrated London News.

SCHOOLS

Sassoon Files

Steven H. Sassoon, Carmel civil engineer, director and member of a dozen or more civic and professional organizations last Tuesday filed candidate's papers for the April school board elections.

Three seats are at stake. Last week Mrs. Herbert B. Blanks filed to run to succeed herself. George Yates, recently appointed to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Dr. Grant Fletcher, has said that he will not run; this seat is, therefore, subject to open contest. The third member, whose term is expiring, Dr. Richard Snyder, has not indicated whether he will run, leaving at this moment only two declared candidates for the three vacancies.

Sassoon, whose wife, Janet, received her elementary and secondary education in Carmel schools, has lived in Carmel since 1955 and practiced engineering here since 1960.

GOVERNMENT

Tree Law Axed

The Carmel Forestry Commission is not going to recommend an ordinance controlling the cutting down of trees on private property. At their Tuesday meeting they decided to report unfavorably to the City Council on a proposal to adopt for Carmel a regulatory ordinance similar to one which has been in effect for some time in Pacific Grove, where it is indifferently observed and casually enforced.

The Commission evidently intends to rest its hope in forest propagation, by encouraging and educating the public to preserve trees where possible and supplement the forest with new plantings on private land.

The possibility of establishing a free tree market, in observance of Arbor Day, will be investigated and reported to the City Council at the February meeting. The plans may involve a proposal to enlist the support of the schools, Boy Scouts and service organizations.

Scenic Routes

The scenic highway is still distinguished by its absence. But much planning and a lot of reports are refining the concept into something at least possible to define.

The State Interdepartmental Committee, after several years of study, is going to make a report to the legislature on standards and a recommended system. Senator Fred S. Farr (Dem., Carmel) is going to introduce legislation intended to bring some reality out of the philosophizing. The scenic highway, according to Farr's latest report, must receive particular attention with respect to the roadbed, curves, cuts and fills, bridges, interchanges and tunnels, so that they are visually pleasing and not offensive to the landscape through which they pass—which, presumably, is of more than passing attractiveness itself.

Highway One, south of Carmel, and the Monterey-Salinas highway are two routes most likely to receive the "scenic" designation if Farr can carry his legislative program in this matter.

Roadside rests, though recently authorized, have been another highway feature distinguished by their conspicuous absence.

But responsibility for them has been transferred from the state Division of Beaches and Parks to the Division of Highways (which has been reluctant to assume the burden), and Farr assures us that we will begin to see them in sufficient quantity throughout the state to make their keystone-shaped green signs a familiar mark.

Haute Couture

The U. S. Post Office Department has taken a bold step forward to improve our postal service. It has garbed its window clerks in blue jackets.

Employees, not uniformly happy about the uniform, are given an annual allowance of $40 to buy the regulation jackets. About 8 of the 25 Carmel office employees are now wearing them.

In 1961 there were 580,433 employees of the vast department. Assuming that the ratio in Carmel is generally consistent throughout the nation, about 140,000 postal clerks are being provided with the allowance, an expense of something like one-half million dollars a year.

Rumors that the move was inspired by the First Lady and Mr. Mr. Oleg Cassini are unconfirmed, as apparently are other rumors that the recent increase in postal rates was entirely imperative.

League baseball games. Unique in its makeup, the Abalone League teams combined major and minor league ball players with women and children. League rules stated that there must be a father and son and a female on each team. The girl usually played first base and after you reached the sack you were never quite sure whether you would be tagged out, or asked to cocktails.

That the calibre of the ball played was excellent was proven one year when the San Francisco dailies got on to those sissy types in Carmel playing with girls, so the boys forgot the girls for the moment, organized a serious club and entered the California State Softball Tournament.

They lost in the finals 1-0 at San Jose, and then they said sneeringly "Yah, see?" and went back to playing with girls.

It was Carmel's big weekly event and much of the social life centered around the Sunday games.

"Heck," somebody was heard to remark, "no one will ever live out here. It's too long a walk to the post office."

WHERE THERE'S LIFE

BY ANDRE HOPE

Glad to hear that someone won the Crosby Tournament after an exciting finish; that the weather and the action were good and that all of your friends had a fine time....

House guests are so pleasant at this time. They're gone all day, trotting around the course, and when they come home at night any old steak will do for dinner and they don't even want you to bother taking the oysters out of the half shell!

So, I'm recuperating in San Francisco; the place I consider smorgasbord with cable cars.

Oh, the sliced pork tenderloin, won-ton soup with fresh vegetables, the pressed duck, coated with crushed, toasted almonds; fresh ginger root and huge, shining mounds of tangerines in the Chinatown markets! The bolts of silk, satin and brocades in the shops. (Particular pet of mine is Mandarin Fashions, where I bought my costume for the 9 February Beaux Arts Ball. No! I won't tell you what it is, but what are you going as?)

Also, Merry New Year! Chinese New Year, that is. This is the year of the rabbit (or the hare, depending on how you look at it). I believe one is supposed to take on the characteristics of the animal of his birth date. Have you any friends with bright pink eyes and twiddling noses? This is their year! Wrap gifts in red paper for good luck; red envelopes for income tax returns, hmmm?.....

I've taken, like a child outside of a candy store window, to browsing in Jackson Square. This is the place where all the lovely home decorating confections come from. Unfortunately, most of them are accessible only to our professional interior decorators. But you can dream and plan.

This is a very sneaky way to introduce a new feature. Starting next week, "Where There's Life" is going to build a pair of new annexes: one, interior decorated; the other, landscaped. Thought it might be fun to get together and exchange ideas; for instance, how to re-upholster a rose or re-plant a sofa (couch? Chesterfield? lounge?).

To put us all in the mood, I'd like to recommend reading the excellent article in Time magazine, 18 January, on architecture.

At this rather bleak time of the year it is so much fun to contemplate the coming season, the observed colors of nature, the subtle, diaphanous scarves of haze draped on the shoulders of the hills of home, the budding leaves and flowers, baby tender and innocent;

the waters of the bay, looking to the skies, sun, stars and moon for their changing color schemes. Even my little dogs looking like honey-covered toast in the sun. In your dreams it rather turns Spring house-cleaning into house-scheming. The more I think about this the more excited I get. Let's see, if I change the color of the.....

MADNESS IN BURLINGAME

There was nothing dull about Carolan Poett's wedding to tall David Knott on Saturday in Burlingame. Not only did Carolan's beautiful veil keep slipping off during the ceremony (to the great amusement of her parents, the Harry Poetts, and the other guests) but as the attractive young couple got ready to leave on their honeymoon, the ushers carried the bridegroom down the stairs.

One of David's four sisters, Susan Knott, who was also a bridesmaid, caught the bride's bouquet. This may be prophetic, as she and John Register are a steady duo. Young John Drum caught the garter, but that's not going to do him much good, since he's going in to the service any minute.

The Lively Arts

MUSIC

Juilliard, Schuller

The Juilliard School of Music will hold auditions for scholarships in Los Angeles on 11 and 12 February. Under the supervision of the Southern California Juilliard Alumni Association, Mrs. Esther Rabirow Alpert, President, the auditions will be held at the Assistance League Playhouse.

Young music students graduating from high school in June or those who may already be at the college or graduate levels are eligible.

The traveling jury will listen to candidates for scholarships in opera, harp, viola, string bass, oboe, English horn, bass clarinet, bassoon, French horn, trombone, bass trombone, and tuba.

One of the Juilliard School's distinguished graduates will conduct the New York Brass and Woodwind ensembles in a program of new American music at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. He is Gunther Schuller, who was a prominent figure for two years at the Monterey Jazz Festival.

Schuller's activities in the New York area have been so extensive this winter that the monthly bulletin put out by Broadcast Music Inc. now contains a special section called "Gunther Schuller News".

The program at the museum is being presented by The Contemporary Music Society in association with the American Composers Alliance, and will feature music by Schuller and other modern American composers. Appearing with the young conductor will be soprano Patricia Neway.

Earlier this year the first in a series of concerts, entitled "Twentieth Century Innovations," under Schuller's direction took place at the Carnegie Recital Hall. A few days previous, his Sonata in B Minor was given its premiere performance by harpsichordist Ralph Kirkpatrick and flutist Samuel Baron at Rogers Auditorium, Metropolitan Museum, New York City, while his Woodwind Quintet had a performance at the concert honoring the 70th birthday of Darius Milhaud, given at Dartmouth College.

French Alliance

Tomorrow evening a program of French music is being sponsored by the Alliance Francaise of the Monterey Peninsula for the benefit of its French scholarship fund. The recital will be presented by Joan Goodwin, pianist, and Karen Steinke, mezzo-soprano, in the Monterey Peninsula College music hall at 8:30 p.m.

Miss Steinke, of local renown, will sing two groups of songs accompanied by MPC faculty member and composer William F. Purdy. Miss Goodwin will play two groups of French music for piano. Tickets may be obtained at the door tomorrow evening.

County Music

Highlighting the next Monterey County Symphony concerts in Salinas and Carmel will be solo performances by two Salinas musicians, Kathryn Thompson, flute, and Myron McTavish, organ, and the premiere of a new work by the Pacific Grove composer, Walter Kelsey.

Mr. Kelsey's composition, "Seascape," is a tone poem dedicated to the Monterey Peninsula, and depicts several aspects of the sea in this area. Other works to be heard are "Poem" by Charles Griffes which will feature flutist Kathryn Thompson as soloist, and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 (The Organ Symphony) with Myron McTavish performing the solo duties.

Miss Thompson, who is currently a student at Salinas High School, has twice won the Young Artists' auditions sponsored jointly by the Symphony and the Monterey Peninsula League, Inc., winning for performances on both the flute and the piano. She is also a regular member of the orchestra's flute section.

The Salinas performance will take place in the High School Auditorium, 4 February at 8:15 p.m., and the Carmel performance will be heard the following evening, 5 February, at Sunset Auditorium, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Music Tonight

Karen Steinke, outstanding mezzo-soprano, twice winner of the Metropolitan auditions, will be among the artists performing for Dollars for Scholars scholarship program sponsored by Alpha Lambda chapter, Delta Kappa Gamma, tonight, at 8 p.m. at the Monterey Peninsula College music hall. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

Also participating in the evening of music will be Mrs. Corliss Myers, harpsichord; Miss Ann Harder and Mrs. Sue Tweedy, tenor recorders; Miss Kathryn Thompson, flute; Miss Dorothy Heer and Miss Angie Machado, piano duo; Miss Muriel Brady and Miss Sharon Jones, violin duet accompanied by Miss Marie Oliver; Miss Ako Ito, classic guitar.

Preview

The Monterey County Symphony Guild will give a preview tea at Casa Serano, 412 Pacific Street, Monterey, on Tuesday at 2 p.m.

John Gosling, conductor of the symphony orchestra, will discuss the next concert, 5 February, and illustrate his talk with recordings.

Big Weekend

"An Experience of the Theater," presented by The Actor's Repertory Theater of the 14th Street Art Center, San Francisco, will be the next program in the current series, "Four Weekends at Big Sur Hot Springs."

Original works will be presented, as well as discussion of new directions in experimental theater, and participation by the audience in improvisation and methods of actor preparation.

Robert Elross and Pierre Delatre will be hosts on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., and on Sunday at 1:30 p.m. The dates: 26 and 27 January.

PAINTING

New Art Classes

Art instruction for both children and adults is being offered by Pamela Hadley at her Carmel home. Mrs. Hadley is the daughter of writer Harry Vernon Dixon, and a great admirer of artist Donald Teague. She has shown her watercolors widely in the Bay area and is just completing a children's book which she has written and illustrated.

Big Sur Art

Three Big Sur artists will exhibit their work at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco next month. Ceramics by Loet Vanderveen, stitchery by Margaret Wentworth, and the sculpture of Gordon Newell will be on display 29 January through 24 February, continuing the series of exhibitions presenting the work of prominent California artists.

Vanderveen will show a number of architectural pieces, including ceramic wall panels, window frames, fountains, garden planters, and lanterns; Miss Wentworth's latest venture in the arts consists of collages made up of old embroideries, braids, multicolored cloth, raveled thread, which she has cut with a scissors and stitched together with a needle. Miss Wentworth (Mrs. Nathaniel A. Owings) has drawn inspiration from what she has seen on world travels.

Working largely with natural stone, Gordon Newell will display some of his large carvings, semi-abstracts of birds, animals and men.

Note: If you are in San Francisco this weekend, don't miss the life-sized photographs of sculpture from the Cathedral of St. Lazarus, Autun, France, by the 12th century master, Gislebertus. We went to the de Young last week out of mere curiosity and had to be told to leave several times at closing time. We never got any further than the rooms containing the excellently photographed sculpture of this Romanesque giant. Eight hundred years later, the art has never transcended that of Gislebertus, Sculptor of Autun.

SOUND POST

BY JACK BENSON

When Rosalyn Tureck finished playing Bach's Prelude and Fugue in A Minor at Sunset Auditorium last Friday night, no one applauded. This, her opening number, was met with dead silence. What had happened? It didn't sound that bad. Perhaps it ended so quickly that everyone was surprised. On the other hand, maybe no one was sure that it had ended. I refuse to believe that Madame Tureck's performance stunned the audience. Not from what I heard.

What I heard was a technically efficient job of playing Bach on the piano. That's all. And the only thing about it that came close to stunning me was the fact that in fervently using the full resources of the piano—soft pedal, sustaining pedal, dynamic contrast possible through key and hammer mechanism—Madame Tureck still failed to get Bach's music much beyond the open lid of the instrument.

Of course, there is the point that Bach didn't write any music for the pianoforte. It didn't exist in his day. He played organ and harpsichord. And anyone who is able to successfully transfer his music to this later instrument—and these are few—does so by submerging many of its 19th century attributes instead of exploiting them. When a key on a harpsichord is struck, it activates a quill into plucking the string. And that's all. No matter how hard one hits the key or how long one holds it down, the resulting tone cannot be made to sound appreciably any louder or any longer than the original pluck.

Bach built things into his music that made use of this fact; Rosalyn Tureck built things into his music that made use of the piano. Which is preferable is a matter of taste. Describing Madame Tureck as the "High Priestess of Bach" as, indeed, the program notes did, is another matter, also of taste. One may view the title as a bit of high romanticism, as, indeed, one may view Madame Tureck's way with Bach. But, since Bach had three wives and 21 children and dedicated all of his music to the glory of God, I'm not sure how he'd go for the high priestess bit.

Meanwhile, nobody applauded. The pianist flexed her fingers, shifted her seating position, rearranged her gown, shot a quizzical glance at the audience, and plunged into the next number—Beethoven's opus 109 piano sonata. The only further piece of evidence I can add to explain the mysterious silence which followed the Bach is that when the Beethoven was over, and Rosalyn Tureck was about to begin a set of variations by Brahms, a lady near me remarked: "Now we have Beethoven."

Everyone loved her, though, no matter which of the "Three B's" they thought they were hearing. When she rose off her seat several times (a la Rubenstein) to come crashing down on the keyboard in the big fugue which ends Brahms' variations, there was footstamping galore in the audience. After all, the program notes informed us "This work—on account of its tremendous challenge—was for many years playable by men exclusively."

Unlike a ball game, however, you can tell the "players" in a concert without a program, even when Bach gets the same curves thrown at him as Beethoven or Brahms. And these three were the only ones at bat that night. They were all "walked", as did I before the encores.

TRIGGER HAPPY

BY RICHARD BRUCE

In the vast array of things that man has invented to better or complicate his condition, few have fascinated him more than the gun. Its functions are simple; to quote Oliver Winchester: "A gun is a machine for throwing a ball." But its ever increasing efficiency in performing this task, and its awesome ability to strike home from a long range have given it a tremendous psychological appeal.

Gun collecting, and the many avenues that it opens to man, has become a fascinating hobby. Beginning in the mid 1200s, when Friar Bacon first started experimenting with what we know today as gunpowder, he caught some significance of the potential force that it contained. Some maintain that he actually invented it himself. Others maintain he discovered the formula in some of the obscure Oriental or Arabic treatises he was so fond of studying. In any event, his writings prove the awareness and fear of the power which he strove to keep secret for many years. He wrote, "This powder is enclosed in an instrument of parchment the size of a finger, and since this can make such a noise that it seriously distresses the ears of men, especially if one is taken unawares, and the terrible flash is also very alarming, if an instrument of larger size were used, no one could stand the terror of the noise and the flash. If the instrument were made of solid material, the violence of the explosion would be much greater." Thus from these writings we see the first firecracker and the vision of containment in solid materials such as our gun barrels.

As it has done for this writer, it can become a many faceted, gratifying hobby. Pride of ownership of fine and rare guns, study of gun history, carving of various woods for stocks and grips, target shooting, hunting, hand loading and gunsmithing are just a few of the many fields that gun collecting will lead an avid collector into.

Many people feel that this is an expensive hobby. It can be if one makes it so. However, it is a definitely established fact that over the past several years antique guns have shown a steady increase in value of around ten per cent per year. A very fair appreciation of value for the collector or trader.

For those who enjoy history and reading, we might recommend The Treasury Of The Gun by Harold L. Peterson. This book was graciously given to me as a Christmas present and has afforded many hours of reading pleasure. The picture plates are authentic, very well done; the history is interesting and complete. From this book came much of the information and inspiration for this column and the ones to follow.

Next week we will go into the fascinating subject of the advancement of guns from those fired by a hot coal or wick, through the flintlocks and the development of the modern, self-contained cartridge. Happy hunting.

Everybody Sings Along With Mitch these days, but Francis Scott Key doesn't seem to swing much any more. At the recent junior high school dedication only about one in fifty was opening his mouth during the rendition of the national anthem, and of these few, many seemed afraid of the sound of their own voices. To the observer, it appeared that there was something to be ashamed of.

BASKETBALL

Breakers Dumped

Carmel High School varsity smothered the Pacific Grove varsity in a basketball contest last Friday at the Padre gymnasium by the score of 57-42. The Carmel JV's won by the score of 41-30, but the lightweights lost by 48-37.

In what coach Lawitske calls "the best game of the year—so far," the Padres used a third quarter spurt to outclass the Breakers. The varsity was led by Rich Wise in the scoring column with 17 points, although it was Inborg Halle, in his first start of the season, who caught the fancy of the fans. Inborg's hustle and determination was a joy to behold as he rebounded, shot (13 points) and played defense with the ferocity of a tiger, holding the Breakers' top gun to 7 points.

For all of the great individual play exhibited by the Padres, team play was dominant in the quick pass-offs of Fernandez and McCarthy as well as the rebounding and feeding of the "Big Jims," Kelley and Belvail.

The Carmel Lightweights ran into trouble in the first half as they fell behind by 11 points, only to come storming back in the third quarter on the fire and fight of Dave Risdon and Ed Brown. The shooting of Rich DiLorenzo and Risdon brought the Padrebabs within one point when the superior height of Pacific Grove made itself known and the Breakers pulled away to finish in front.

The Carmel junior varsity jumped out in front at the beginning and stayed there all the way. The shooting of Al Nishimura (15), Bob Moffatt (9) and Ron Berry (6) led the way. However, the floor play of sophomores John Tolan, Steve Trapkus and George Buck make things look good for the Padres in the future.

This Friday is the BIG ONE for the Carmel varsity. They travel to Gilroy to battle the Gilroy Mustangs. Gilroy has not lost a game in some 35 league contests. However, with the play shown by the Padres last Friday the upset of the season may be in the making.

Wrestling, the ancient and classic sport with as much fascination for sculptors as for athletes, has endured some strange humiliations. The absurd and ludicrous carnival sideshows which today pass for "professional" wrestling have earned

Little League

Orville Jones, president of Carmel Little League, has announced that the 1963 season will open on 4 May. Lack of parent participation in the program may mean that eight-year-olds will be dropped this year; so it is hoped that some eager fathers will show up. Six coaches or managers are also needed. They will have minor league teams involving Saturday volunteer hours only.

Mrs. Thomson Hudson, last year's Little League Auxiliary president, has called a meeting for 30 January at 2 p.m., in the River School cafeteria, to elect officers for 1963. All mothers are invited. Henry Newman, player agent, will explain sign-ups and try-outs.

Try-out dates are 6, 13, 20 April (Saturdays) at 1 p.m. at the Junior High School. All interested boys should attend all three try-outs.

To be eligible for Little League, a boy must be born on or after 1 August, 1953. If the league receives sufficient help from fathers, then this date will be advanced one year to allow eight-year-olds to play.

Reasons For Getting Married (No. 6): "When we sold the house, we had to get rid of the dog. I gave him to our architect (he's so attractive) whom I'm going to introduce to a darling friend of mine. Maybe they will get married. Then, I can stop over and see the dog."

Organizations

Woman's Club

Rosamund Zammit and Nick Zanides gave a reading of Coward's "Private Lives" and a selection from the plays of G. B. Shaw at the Carmel Woman's Club on Monday afternoon. The club's book section presented the program.

Pouring at the tea tables were Mrs. John M. Cooper, Mrs. Norman Hiestand, Mrs. A. M. Young, and Mrs. S. K. Thomas. Hostesses were Mrs. S. H. Johnston, Mrs. Fred Kane, Mrs. Frank Cox, and Mrs. Max Forstl.

Frank Adams, from the U.S.O., will show a color film, "Roses on Parade," at the garden section meeting on Monday at 2 p.m. Adams will be presented by Miss Gretchen Wahl, garden chairman. Films of the 17-acre Jackson and Perkins gardens with two million roses in bloom, and the annual Rose Festival, will also be shown.

Town House

At next Wednesday's Carmel Foundation program, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davidson will show colored slides of the "Most Scenic Spots" visited on their travels. An experienced photographer, Mr. Davidson will show slides of "the unusual and beautiful," rather than the well known tourist sights, in Sicily, the Dordogne Valley in France, and the Dolomites of Austria.

All interested persons are invited to the program, which will begin at 3 p.m., and the tea, which follows at 4 p.m.

Pauline Woodberry and Carl Bensberg gave a song recital at Carmel Foundation Town House last Wednesday afternoon. Accompanist was Mrs. Mae Marshall.

Democrats

The first meeting of 1963 of the Carmel Women's Democratic Club was held today at noon in the home of Mrs. William A. Smith. Members brought their own sandwiches; dessert and coffee were served.

The program was a presentation and discussion of national and state issues that will be studied at the regional CDC conference in Fresno in early February and subsequently voted into policy at the CDC state convention in Bakersfield in March.

Audubon

Twenty members attended the recent monthly meeting of the Bird-A-Month section of the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society in the home of Mrs. Anna Brislawn and Miss Florence Waller, 16th and Camino Real.

Rare and unusual winter birds were discussed and a lively discussion of unpredictable individuals was led by Miss Beatrice Howitt.

Since 1 January, an Orchard Oriole has been spending a great deal of time in the 600 block of Ocean View, Pacific Grove. This eastern species has never before been reported on the peninsula.

Unusual birds in your vicinity should be reported to Mrs. G. P. Lamont, MA 4-7812, who will also help with identification.

Alpha Lambda

Mrs. Marcia DeVoe is chairman of the scholarship committee of Alpha Lambda chapter, Delta Kappa Gamma (national honorary association for women), which will present a music recital tonight at 8 in the Monterey Peninsula music hall. The concert will raise funds for the chapter's annual award to either a Hartnell College or MPC girl scholar who wants to earn a teaching credential.

Others assisting the "dollars for scholars" program are Miss Evelyn Sharp, president of the chapter; Miss Nellie Ryder, publicity; Mrs. Hazel Allemand, Miss Ann Arpaolu, Mrs. Mary Clayton, Mrs. Myra Wermuth, Miss Aleene Luther, Miss Laura Tarver, Miss Gertrude Waterman, and Miss Eleanor Ziel.

High Twelve

Carmel High Twelve Club will meet tomorrow noon at the Masonic Temple. "Personal Observations" will be the subject of speaker Julien Caheen.

All master Masons are invited to attend.

Fourteen guests witnessed the color slide and black and white print contests of the Padre Trails Camera Club Thursday night at Carmel High School.

Winners of the color slide group were Dr. Willis Basye, Ken Redman, and Paul Day. Dale Hale, the judge for the evening, awarded honorable mentions to Dick Christian and Gordon Lawson. Both Ken Redman and Dick Christian are new members.

Winners in the black and white prints contest were Jean C. Cote and Colonel E. L. Modlin.

The new program for the year was given out, and additional copies have been placed in local camera stores.

Four new photographers were elected to membership in the club: Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Perkins and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Orin.

Kiwanis

At the luncheon meeting of the Carmel Kiwanis Club last Thursday, speaker Carl Patnude described his 10-day trip to Mexico last fall, showing slides of Mexico City, Cuernavaca, Taxco, and Acapulco.

On Tuesday the Carmel and Carmel Valley Clubs held a joint meeting in the Valley.

Mothers' March

On Tuesday Mrs. Antone Hrusa, chairman, and Mrs. Laurette Toldi, co-chairman, with their group of volunteers, will be knocking on every Carmel door in the 25th anniversary Mothers' March to aid the March of Dimes research program.

This program produced two polio vaccines, and now includes support of the Salk Institute for Biological Studies being built in San Diego. The institute will be directed by Dr. Jonas Salk and will be a means of helping to eliminate birth defects and arthritis in children.

Anyone wishing to volunteer for the Mothers' March may call Mrs. Hrusa (MA 4-1139) or Mrs. Toldi (MA 4-7608).

The following is a statement of the facts showing its urgency:

Both Federal Congress and State Legislature have adopted comprehensive civil defense and disaster laws. Both Federal and State plans contemplate immediate adoption of such local legislation as is necessary to put into operation a coordinated and effective civil defense and disaster program so that each citizen and each community will be ready in the event of a disaster to afford as complete protection as is possible to life and property. In order that the ordinances of this city relating to civil defense and disaster may be brought into conformity with the Federal and State plans at the earliest possible date, it is necessary that this ordinance take effect immediately.

ROSE, the undersigned, City Clerk of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of Ordinance No. 56 C.S. which was given its first reading at a Regular Meeting of the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, held on the 5th day of December, 1962, and finally adopted at a Regular Meeting of the said Council on the 9th day of January, 1963.

I further certify that upon its passage the foregoing Ordinance was signed by the Mayor of said City and attested by the City Clerk thereof.

There is a sign on the Nimitz Freeway which reads:

"Stop Casting Porosity," but many people never do. They don't know how.

A lovely San Francisco debutante went to her recent coming-out party without the $50,000 in family jewels she had been planning to wear. They had been stolen from her home the night before.

"I still hope to have a marvelous party," she said.

Mrs. Heath Visits Cushings

Mrs. Wilfrid Paul Heath of Carmel returned last Thursday from visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Harvey Cushingham in their new home in Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Cushingham is Dody Heath, daughter of Mrs. Heath and the late Mr. Heath, and an actress of stage, screen and television. Her husband, a tennis star who has won national and international trophies, is associated with an actors' agency in Hollywood.

Dody and Jack recently returned to California from a honeymoon in Rome, Madrid, Paris and London, following their marriage on 29 November in Rome. Writer Alice Moates of Washington, D.C., part-time resident of Italy and a friend of the couple, made arrangements for the ceremony, which was performed by the mayor of Rome in that city's capitol building, the Campidoglio. Other friends in attendance were film producer George England and Mrs.

England. On Dody's finger Jack slipped the gold wedding ring which had belonged to her father's mother.

As soon as Dody's film schedule permits, she and Jack hope to come to Carmel to visit Mrs. Heath and Dody's brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Scott Heath of Rancho Rio Vista.

Miss Woodward, Cole Weston Wed

Margaret Woodward of Carmel will marry Cole Weston, photographer and son of the late Edward Weston, on Sunday evening in Carmel.

Maggi, a native of England, is the daughter of Mrs. Georgina Woodward of Johannesburg, South Africa, and has been a Peninsula resident for the past 14 months. She is a professional singer who has appeared on TV and radio shows, and in supper clubs in London, New York and California.

Mrs. Flora Weston of Carmel is Cole's mother. His brothers are Ted Weston of Pacific Grove, Neil and Brett Weston of Carmel Highlands.

Cole's panoramic color photograph of surf breaking on the Big Sur coast was a double-spread cover on a recent issue of the international and Spanish editions of Life magazine.

He also operates the Weston Trout Farm on the Coast Highway.

THE OWNER WAS PRETTY BURNED UP —

WHEN WE TOLD HIM his home would sell on today's market for $25,000. He said it was worth at least $35,000 because Mr. Jones got that much for his house and his house wasn't nearly as good, and his friends said it is worth that much, and besides Carmel buyers will pay fantastic prices for anything.

WE COULD HAVE TOLD HIM his house was worth $35,000 and taken the listing and he would have been delighted with us. Three months later he would have been burned up when we finally brought him an offer for $25,000 and said it was the best we could do—or didn't bring him any offer at all.

ALSO, TO KEEP HIM FROM BEING ANGRY NOW and thus get the listing, we didn't have to tell him what his neighbor's house actually sold for, either. If he wanted to waste several months trying for the high price the neighbor said he got, that's all right with us, but we think he should know the truth.

IF YOU'RE THINKING OF SELLING and if you don't want to be angry at all—not now or three months from now when your house doesn't sell—you can ask our considered opinion about the selling price which we will base on all the FACTS available and will give you without any obligation. Then YOU decide if you wish to sell, and at what price. IT'S YOUR PROPERTY, you paid for it, you improved it, you have to buy another house with the proceeds. Only you can make the final decision as to price. But if you ask us, you can be sure we will give you an honest opinion of its actual value on today's market—and today's real estate market is our sole, full-time business. May we discuss your property with you?

Disaster Shelter

At its recent January meeting, the Civil Defense and Disaster Council was advised by secretary Hugh Bayless that the first fallout shelter agreement had been signed, making available the storage basement of the Purity Market on Mission at 6th. Still troubled by the problem of small capacity and the possibility of panic flight to the shelter by too many people, the Council has not pushed forward with plans for stocking or operation of the shelter in the event of disaster.

The Board of Supervisors has assigned Sunset, Woods, River, Carmel High, Carmel Junior High, Palo Colorado and Captain Cooper schools to the Council for emergency control, and the Council has agreed to accept the responsibility.

Mayor Eben Whittlesey, Fire Chief Robert Smith, Administrative Assistant to the City Clerk Hugh Bayless, Building Inspector Floyd Adams, Police Chief Clyde Klummann, Street Superintendent William Askew, William J. Brady, Dr. Russell Pratt, Steven H. Sassoon and James R. Belvail compose the membership of the council, charged with the preparation and operation of a disaster and civil defense program.

"BORN YESTERDAY" MISCARRIES

By LARRY ROSE

Travesty is not satire nor is burlesque comedy. When a production such as the current presentation of "Born Yesterday" at the Circle Theater fails to make these distinctions and does not even appear to understand them, a disappointing experience ensues.

This is unfortunate not alone because of a soggy and frivolous treatment of a play which should crackle with an almost vicious commentary on the political aspects of human corruption; it is unfortunate because a splendid interpretation of the leading role is almost squandered.

Sam Karas has evoked a grossly obscene yet malevolently innocent character out of the part of Harry Brock, an amoral, wealthy and ambitious junk dealer blundering into the Federal Capitol in Washington. The portrayal has evolved a man of such compelling complexity, contradiction and fascinating intensity that he almost cries aloud to be left alone on the stage. I grieved that he was not, and that he had to endure the encumbrance of a cast which had memorized the script, could recite the lines and had down pretty well their cues. By the middle of the last act, grief had turned to mourning, even Karas' vital attack could not shatter the trivial mimicry going on about him, and the whole thing ended on a giggly and uncertain note of uncomfortable relief that overcame for the moment my great disappointment.

This, I freely admit, is really quite a harsh indictment, and precisely against whom to direct it I am not sure.

The play is not very complicated. It is the story of an atrociously uncouth and coarse man who arrives in Washington to exert corrupt influence on people who adore money, even as he respects it, and the stunning irresistibility of this influence. This is dominant to the sub-plot of the intellectual awakening of his mistress, a shrewd but vapid blonde. It is most annoying when the singularly unremarkable definition of this character is a shrill and whining voice, but apparently it was the only characteristic relied on by Myrtelrose Craig, who should have been kept oblivious of the fact that Judy Holliday made a success of the role of Billie Dawn. There are other ways, certainly, to play the part, and Myrtelrose should have been stimulated into discovering them; for, certainly, she has the capacity.

But nobody seemed to devote much attention to the fact that the play is well-written. Pace, varying degrees of intensity, character exposition, climaxes and summation are all provided; indeed, they are demanded. However the monotonous and insensitive keying of the production is distressing, especially because it clutters a portrait of such high and lurid color as Sam Karas provides.

I wish it had been possible to shake off the persistent feeling that the production was unimaginative, unresourceful and irresolute. The play is excellent satire; Myrtelrose Craig has more talent than is indicated by her sad reliance on vocal mimicry; Paul Ransome knows full well that a Washington attorney who was formerly an Assistant Attorney General has more positive assurance—even though subject to disintegration—which should have had a sardonic expression; and Fred Rider knows very well that a cast, even a cast of competent actors, has to have guidance in character evolvment and direction in mood and theme statement. I am sure he also realizes that he is producing the only legitimate theater on the Peninsula at the moment, a responsibility as well as an opportunity not to be frittered away.
